

Journal of Pacific History Inc.
Call for applications – JPH Publication Incentive grants

The Journal of Pacific History Inc. invites qualified persons to apply for a Publication Incentive grant. These competitive grants are offered to help support early career Pacific historians to prepare articles for submission to the Journal of Pacific History.

See <https://www.tandfonline.com/loi/cjph> for the journal's Aims and scope, Journal information, and Instructions for authors. Applicants must follow the Instructions scrupulously in preparing their article.

Prospective applicants should note that the journal is primarily 'dedicated to research concerning the Pacific Islands (including the island of New Guinea), their peoples and their pasts'. Where difficult choices have to be made in the selection process, proposals with such a focus are likely to be preferred.

Qualifications

Anyone who has completed a PhD or MA since 2018 in a field relevant to Pacific history, or who is currently enrolled for a doctorate in such a field, can apply for a grant of AU$3,000 to prepare an article for submission to peer review on a topic of relevance to the Journal of Pacific History. In the case of co-authored proposals, all cited authors must meet these guidelines.

Successful applicants will receive AU$500 upfront; AU$1,000 on submission through the Journal of Pacific History Taylor & Francis web portal, before 30 September 2025, of a manuscript accepted by the editors to send for peer review; and AU$1,500 when the accepted final article is sent for production by the Journal of Pacific History. In the case of multiple authors, the total grant will be AU$4,000, divided equally.

Application process

Candidates should submit a recent CV, letters of support from two referees, and a proposal of up to 1,000 words by 30 November 2024 to the Secretary of JPH Inc (bronwen.douglas@anu.edu.au).

Article proposals should include the following:

Title and 200-word abstract

Outline: rationale of the topic and a brief historiography

Timeline: to submission via the JPH online portal

Applications will be assessed by a sub-committee of the Editorial Board of the Journal of Pacific History. A mentor may be appointed to assist successful applicants.
