

02/02/2024 Introducing Plain Language Summaries for Public Integrity

We are delighted to announce the addition of a new section to Public Integrity's articles: Plain Language Summaries (PLS).

PLS communicate the significance of academic research evidence to a broad audience in jargon-free and clear language. They are published within the article (similar to an abstract) and in front of the Taylor & Francis paywall.

We are excited to introduce PLS to Public Integrity, giving wider accessibility and reach to its published research, and providing a 'bridge' between the academic and practitioner communities.

We now require that PI's authors submit a PLS with their article. More information about plain language summaries, including their scope, requirements, intended audience and reasons for publishing them can be found on Taylor & Francis' Author Services page. Please also visit PI's Instructions for Authors page and review the information in 'About the Journal.'
