Journal of Teaching in International Business is seeking submissions.

The Journal of Teaching in International Business instructs international business educators, curriculum developers, and institutions of higher education worldwide on methods and techniques for better teaching to ensure a global mindset and optimum, cost-effective learning in international business. It is generally assumed that the teaching of international business is universal, but that application of teaching methods, processes, and techniques in varying socioeconomic and cultural environments is unique. The journal offers insights and perspectives to international business educators and practitioners to share concerns, problems, opportunities, and solutions to the teaching and learning of international business subjects. This journal contains original, significant, scholarly, and applied articles that: contribute to insights for improving teaching in international business; say something meaningful to international business curriculum developers; use empirical data and analysis to show the effectiveness of the proposed approach to teaching international business; enrich and make more effective the classroom presentations of teachers of international business; facilitate research endeavors of international business consultants, researchers, business education foundations, and institutions of higher learning.

A manuscript normally should be no more than 30 pages, including title, abstract, keywords, text, footnotes, references, tables, figures, and appendixes, and properly formatted with Times New Roman, size 12, double-spaced, with 1-inch margins. For more information on how to submit your paper, please check out the journal's Instructions for Authors.

Peer Review Policy: All articles published in Journal of Teaching in International Business have undergone rigorous peer review based on initial editor screening and anonymous refereeing by at least two anonymous referees who are subject experts.
